27.50 crores, whereas the number of persons actually living in forests is 10.00 crores. The forest fringe villages comprise 28% of the total number of villages in the country.

Forets are closely connected with the livelihoods of people living in the forest fringes, as they depend on forest produce for self-consumption and cash incomes. Forests also support grazing of nearly 60% of the livestock in the country and are used for collection of headloads of firewood for the sale in the market.
